

St. Lawrence Seaway Tech Trip June 4 - 6, 2009

Now that the long Canadian winter has finally passed, join us as we invade the Great White North for a quick but serious weekend of technical diving on the St. Lawrence Seaway. Head up Friday night for two days of first class tech diving and be back home Sunday evening!

The Accommodations

We'll stay with our friends at Caigers Resort, located right on the St. Lawrence Seaway. Rooms are double occupancy, nothing fancy, but the staff is great and the restaurant serves up some fine food and cold beverages!

The Diving

Diving in the upper St. Lawrence River can be many things, but on this trip one thing is sure – it will be deep! The river is filled with wrecks of all sorts, and most are fully intact, thanks to the lack of wood boring worms in the river. Each day we'll make two technical dives, and the sites we expect to visit include the Jodrey, Sir Robert Peal, Ocanta, and Wallace Gorge. Depths range to nearly 300 ft max, although there is plenty of great technical diving to be enjoyed in the 100 to 200 ft depth range.

Participants must meet the qualifications for this expedition, but will be well rewarded with intact historic wrecks, superb early season visibility, and a chance to add some really cool and rarely visited entries into your logbook.

The Package:

- Two nights lodging, double occupancy
- Two days of technical diving, with one a.m. dive and one p.m. dive each day
- Divers must provide their own transportation, gear, tanks & gases (rentals can be arranged with advanced notice)
